INTERVIEW SPECIAL!

It's the 20th anniversary of the first appearance of the Slitheen, so who better to speak to than the person who is drawing them, series artist Sami Kivelä! Titan's Doctor Who editor Jonathan Wilkins sat down with Sami to discuss this new series.

SAMI KIVELÄ - INTERIOR ART AND COVER ARTIST

JW: Was Doctor Who something on your radar that you wanted to draw?

SK: I've always thought that Doctor Who is a fascinating series, but, to be honest, I didn't know too much about The Doctor before I was asked if I would be interested in drawing the new Fifteenth Doctor miniseries.

I usually work on creator-owned comics, so this was an interesting opportunity to do something different. It's been truly insightful to dive into the Doctor Who world and to learn more about all the characters.

JW: There are a variety of new characters in this story. Who are your favorites to draw and which characters were the most challenging to bring to life?

SK: Of the ones I've designed for the series, I think Methelough is my favorite. She's a funny and quirky character, which I really like. But I also think her design was the hardest one to figure out – mainly because her initial description was quite close to an already existing character in another series. So, it took a few tries to develop something original. However, the most challenging character is definitely H-8. There is so much going on in its design, but I guess I can only blame myself for that, ha!

JW: Which sequence did you most enjoy drawing?

There are many scenes I've enjoyed drawing so far (I'm working on the third issue at the moment), but if I had to pick one, it would probably be the underwater scene from the second issue. It's something I hadn't done before on that scale, so it was a nice challenge. It also gave me a chance to play more with Methelough's character and to try to come up with the way she acts and moves beneath the surface.

JW: How does Doctor Who differ from your previous work?

SK: I don't think it actually differs that much from my scifi/fantasy work aside from the fact that it's based on a licensed property and the main character is well-known from other comics and media. Doctor Who is also more suitable for bit of a younger audience than my previous work, as I've drawn quite a few comics with mature content. That's also one of the reasons why this project is so engaging!

JW: You've also drawn a series of covers for this run. Is the process for cover illustration different from that of sequential art?

SK: Yes, the process differs a bit. With a cover illustration, you try to capture the essence of the book in one image that (hopefully!) makes readers want to pick up and read the book. With interior pages, the main goal is to help the story flow from panel to panel so that it makes sense to readers and at the same time entertains them.

BBC, DOCTOR WHO, TARDIS, DALEK and CYBERMAN (word marks and devices) are trade marks of the British Broadcasting Corporation and are used under licence. BBC logo © BBC 1996.
